MBBS AT EGYPT

At Egypt Medical Universities We are 'One'

MBBS admission in Egypt has become a new destination for overseas study. Egypt is known to be the third-highest population country in the Africa region. Egypt's heartland, the Nile River valley and delta, was the home of one of the principal civilizations of the ancient Middle East and, like Mesopotamia farther east, was the site of one of the world's earliest urban and literate societies. The modern history of Egyptian medical education begins in 1827. Its curriculum development process was guided by the recommendations of a national symposium on innovation in medical education held in Al-Fayoum, southeast of Cairo, at the beginning of that year. Currently, admission to Egyptian higher education institutions, including medical schools, is managed centrally by a national coordination office. The male-to-female ratio for admission and graduation is almost balanced, with an average of 10,000 physicians graduating annually from Egyptian medical schools. To date, Egyptian medical schools have followed the British model, comprising a five-year program of undergraduate medical education. This system features a clear preclinical-clinical dichotomy, and (in Egypt) takes English as the language of instruction. A Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery (MBBCh) is awarded upon graduation, but graduates must attend 2 year internship program before obtaining their license to practice as general practitioners. Almost all medical schools in Egypt have well-established teaching hospitals, and most confine the clinical training of students to these hospitals. The universities here are approved by the WHO, MCI, WFME, ECFMG, UNESCO and Medical Councils of many countries such as India, America, the UK, etc. The universities in Egypt also offer scholarships to deserving students. The students choose MBBS in Egypt because they will experience traditional cultures of Egypt, along with their studies.

Study in EGYPT, Live in Cairo

Once you land here, you start your journey.

In Egypt, you will find whatever your heart seeks. You will feel and witness thousands of years of civilization along with modern day life.

Ain Shams University

Ain Shams University was founded in 1950 and is located in Egypt. The university offers both undergraduate and postgraduate programs and has seven campus locations. Four are located in Alabassya, two in Heliopolis and one in Shubra Elkheima. It is one of the largest educational medical institutions in Africa and the Middle East. Ain Shams University is focused on blending theoretical and practical skills and on strengthening cooperation between scientific research centers regionally and internationally. The Faculty of Medicine serves more than 6000 undergraduate students over the 6 years of undergraduate teaching, and more than 1500 post-graduate students (Diplomas, Master of Science in medicine & Medical Doctorate) in various academic and clinical departments. Not only one of the medical schools, but a free (not for profit) hospital serving more than one million patients annually. Faculty of Medicine Educational Hospital (internal medicine and surgery) consists of an outpatient clinic and inpatient department. Both have approximately 3200 beds (in 1997), with more than 10,000 staff working in all departments and serving about 2,000,000 patients from all over Egypt annually.
